CIS U.S. serial set.

This collection covers the period 1789-1969 and includes the following congressional publications: House and Senate reports and documents, and Senate executive reports and treaty documents. These publications were, until 1816, compiled into the American State Papers, then into serially numbered volumes known as the Serial Set. Over the years, other materials were sporadically included; among the most significant are House and Senate Journals, some executive publications, annual reports of government agencies, and investigative studies. For a detailed description of contents, see the introduction to the printed guide, p. ix-xi.

Description from the Library of Congress