Marburger Index: Bilddokumentation zur Kunst in Deutschland

The Marburger Index consists of thousands of photographic reproductions of all types of art and architecture--buildings, sketches, manuscripts, drawings, painting, and decorative objects including furniture, stained glass--all found in Germany. The works date from pre-history to the present and are of both German and foreign origin. The collection is arranged by place and within each place into several categories: municipal architecture, sacred architecture, secular architecture, and collections. Within each of these categories, the arrangement is by exterior architecture, interior architecture, and miscellaneous fittings. Because of the way the project was compiled there is more than one overall alphabetic sequence of places. Some of the photographs in the collection are as old as 100 years--most are more recent. Each photograph has a brief description under it.

Description from the Library of Congress