Description: These two developmental screening tools are used throughout Wisconsin. Both tools have been shown to have acceptable validity and reliability rates for use with diverse populations of families with young children. This training will provide participants and understanding of the two tools and their uses, along with best practices in supporting families in the use of these tools.

Participants will learn:
- the benefits and research behind the tools.
- to use the tools in my work or understanding of how it relates to my work.
- to provide resources for caregivers to support the child’s development based on the ASQ-3.
- to share results with parents/ caregivers in strength-based way.
- to score the ASQ-3 with understanding of the 3 zones (above, monitoring and below cutoff).
- to discuss social emotional development with parents and caregivers.
- to facilitate and score the ASQ-SE2
- to make appropriate referrals for further assessment
