Using Films and Documentaries to Teach Latin America

Saturday, October 13
1-3pm (includes lunch)

(following the NCCLA annual conference a.m. sessions)
Eau Claire, WI

The workshop is intended to build on the cross-disciplinary nature of the NCCLA and a broader network of regional Latin Americanists by bringing together faculty from a variety of fields to talk about a particular topic or pedagogical tool in an informal, roundtable format.

The focus this year is on the use of films and documentaries to teach about Latin America. The workshop will address the role of film in thinking about Latin/o America through a variety of lenses, and specifically focusing on bridging our 'viewings' between the Social Sciences and the Humanities.

Cost: $20 (includes lunch)

To register:
Select the workshop option (and include $20) on the NCCLA 2018 conference registration form.

For more information: Eduardo Magalhães III (Simpson College):
eduardo.magalhaes@simpson.edu