

Workshop for Middle School and High School Educators

Sparking Critical Thinking,
Communication and Connection
with Global News:
*Focus on Migration in the Americas

Saturday, November 16, 2019

9am-3:30pm

Northwest Quadrant D 1871 (2025 E Newport Ave)
University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee

Photo credit: Pulitzer Center Broken Border project (Texas Tribune reporting)

Join us for a hands-on professional development workshop that will introduce methods for using global news stories and journalism skills to deepen students' engagement with their curricula, while also increasing their critical thinking and communication skills. Led by education staff from the Pulitzer Center on Crisis Reporting, a nonprofit journalism organization that aims to increase public engagement with pressing issues by supporting journalism and educational outreach, the session will also feature presentations by award-winning journalists who are currently covering pressing issues facing communities in Latin America.

Cost: $20 (includes continental breakfast and lunch)

Registration deadline: November 8, 2019 (space is limited)

To register, send an email (name, school, courses taught) to: Julie Kline (jkline@uwm.edu / 414-229-5986). Payment information will be provided with registration confirmation.

Sponsored by the Pulitzer Center on Crisis Reporting, the Center for Latin American and Caribbean Studies (CLACS), the Institute of World Affairs, and the Center for International Education (CIE), University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. CLACS and CIE are Title VI National Resource Centers, funded by the U.S. Department of Education.