

English 750 Course Description
Spring 2021
Watson

English 750 is a graduate seminar in “the history of rhetoric and writing studies,” which aims to critique every word in that title. Over the course of this semester, we will work together to 1) interrogate, decolonize, and reimagine “the” history of the field of Rhetoric and Composition; 2) engage with the multiplicities of histories of the field and trouble over their implications; and 3) learn how to contribute in new ways to historical understandings of rhetoric and writing studies.
