‘Carte drôlatique d’Europe pour 1870' (humorous map of Europe, 1870)

What are nationalities? What are nations? How do they come to be associated with states and territories? What is national identity, and how does it relate to other identities? Why, when there is so much talk of globalization and global culture, are so many countries breaking up, peacefully or through civil war?

This mid-level course will introduce you to a political geography perspective on nationalities and nations. Nation, state and territory are ambiguous and often contested. This course explores these geopolitical categories by providing both theoretical perspectives on and case studies of the emergence of nationalisms, and the outcomes of state and territorial construction, control and resistance. We will examine nationalism as an ideology that involves identity & belonging, and that is usually manifested through particular geographic practices. We will also examine the future of the sovereign state and citizenship in the context of globalization, legacies of imperialism, migration, social movements, and neoliberalization.

Issues of identity within groups, national or otherwise, can be highly contested. The greatest respect must, therefore, be given to everyone in the class who voices their concerns, opinions and experiences.

REQUIRED TEXTS AND MATERIALS:

The required readings for the course are available on the course D2L site. I have chosen this method of providing the readings rather than a bound reader for purchase to allow you to save money. You may choose whether (and in what form) to print the readings, or whether to use them in digital form.

NOTE: You must bring the assigned reading to class in either paper or digital form (already downloaded to your device). Having the assigned text IN CLASS will assist your participation, and counts as part of your participation grade.

Although this course uses D2L extensively, it is a face-to-face course. Further, although some communication will be through D2L, you are expected to pay attention to in-class announcements and to your UWM/Office365 e-mail.
COURSE OBJECTIVES, EXPECTATIONS AND POLICIES

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

This is a social science course, designed to develop your critical thinking and ability to analyze contemporary geopolitical and urban political issues. The course will equip you to evaluate assumptions about nationalities, nations, globalization, states, empires, and territory that inform current debates about national issues, such as national identities, immigration, citizenship, and human rights; and reporting of news events from around the world.

By the end of this course, you will be able to:
- Explain the relationships among nationalities, nations, nationalisms, states, empires, race, and ethnicity, and various geographic phenomena
- Recognize and critique theories of the state, nationality, etc. in various media.
- Recognize and understand how key spatialities that operate in national identity construction, including borders, symbolic places, landscape, and embodied practices.
- Distinguish among different understandings of citizenship in different countries and in social movement organizations within countries.
- Apply some of these tools and theories to the analysis of a nationalist movement or other social movement or social movement organization.
- Understand how different understandings of citizenship, in interaction with economic and other processes, differently shape both national territories and urban space.

COURSE PARTICIPATION AND ASSIGNMENTS

To accomplish the above objectives, we will engage in participatory learning, case study analysis, and intensive writing.

Participatory learning emphasizes students’ responsibility for learning the material, and provides structured opportunities for class discussion and debate. This course uses participatory learning strategies both to develop skills of critical reasoning, and to make the classroom itself a laboratory for critical debate. The strategies we will use to achieve this principle include: lecture-discussion format with reading questions distributed in advance so that you will know what to expect; structured small group interaction; base groups; and presentation of case studies.

Case study analysis involves relating information on one ‘case,’—in this course, one country, one nationalist movement, one social movement organization, or one place—to social theory. In this class, we will address theories of nationalism and citizenship, for example. I will present case study analyses in lecture. You will develop an annotated bibliography with a short introduction and argument on a case study of your choice.

Writing intensive teaching emphasizes developing your ability to think critically through the practice of writing. For this course, that means that writing assignments will test your understanding of key issues in political geography; you will need to master sufficient content to make coherent arguments. There will be four types of writing assignment: in-class responses, an annotated bibliography, a reflection paper, and essay exams. I encourage you to use the UWM Writing Center (http://www.uwm.edu/Dept/English/wcenter/) to improve your writing.

PARTICIPATION: ATTENDANCE, READINGS, ACTION!

Attendance and participation are of paramount importance in this class. Participation is graded. Your participation grade will be based on a combination of attendance, reading the assigned text and bringing it to class, and active participation. These will be assessed through (1) in-class writing on note cards, (2) ‘base group’ and other small group participation, and (3) free participation.

(1) In nearly every class, there will be an in-class writing assignment. Perhaps I will post a question on the screen, and you will have about 5 minutes to answer it on a 4x6 note card that I will provide. Or I will give you a question to discuss in your group, and then ask you to write a short commentary on the discussion. Some questions will be ‘pre-reading’ questions to provoke reflection in preparation for reading a text; others will be comprehension check questions to find out whether you understood a key point in the reading or the lecture.

(2) You will be assigned to a ‘base group’ that will be your small discussion group for at least the first third of the semester. This class is large enough that whole group discussion will be improved by doing small-group work first. In the latter part of the semester, your base group may change depending on your annotated bibliography topic. Peer review of annotated bibliographies will go on within the base group. Peer review often works better when both parties have a common interest (e.g. related topics). Free and voluntary participation in the form of asking questions, answering questions, contributing your ideas in small-group and whole-class discussion, and so on is encouraged.

(3) There will be a group presentation based on one scholarly article on post-colonial national identity in India. You will have a chance to rank your choice of articles. Then you will read your assigned article and take notes. After that, you will have one class session to work with classmates in a group (by article) on a short presentation on that article. You will make the presentation the following week. Thus, some work is necessary outside of class, but in-class preparation time is crucial for group coordination.

THERE ARE NO OPPORTUNITIES TO MAKE UP IN-CLASS WRITING ASSIGNMENTS. You may miss TWO classes without directly affecting your participation grade. After two absences, your participation grade will be affected.

This class is an upper-division geography course. As such, it expects students to be ready to practice and improve such skills as reading and comprehending challenging texts, critically evaluating various media (text, visual, etc.), and writing. One objective of this course is to develop your research skills. Therefore, evaluation of your learning will be done through not only quizzes and exams, but assessment of the annotated bibliography that will be the product of an independent research project. Work for the annotated bibliography will require reading in addition to the assigned course readings, as well as note-taking and writing. The time needed to prepare for class and complete all assignments may vary, depending on your previous work in this area and related disciplines. Nevertheless, here is an estimate of hours you are likely to work in this 3-credit course:

| Time in the classroom (face to face instruction and discussion) | 33.75 hours |
| Time for preparation and study | 40 |
| Time completing assignments (including online quizzes) | 67 |
| Time taking exams | 3.25 hours |
| TOTAL: | 144 hours |

DUE DATES, PENALTIES FOR LATE WORK, AND MAKE-UP ASSIGNMENTS

Due dates
Please see the course schedule and/or the assignment documents for assignment deadlines. All online quizzes will be due by midnight on Thursdays (except Quiz #8 on a Tuesday). Case study and reflection papers will be due to the course D2L drop box by midnight on Sundays. Advance planning will help you to meet deadlines. If another important event or course deadline converges with a deadline for Geog 309, it is your responsibility to plan your work accordingly. Always check the latest news posting on the course D2L site for any changes in deadlines.

Penalties for late work
To be fair to students in the course who turn their work in on time, unless a documented medical or personal emergency arises, any work turned in late will be penalized 10% of your grade the first day it is late (from 0-24 hours of the due time/day), 10% the second day (25-48 hours), and an additional 10% for each 24-hour period thereafter. Please see me immediately if you know you will have a problem turning your work in on time.
Make-up assignments and exams

Again in the interest of fairness to all students, you may not reschedule assignment due dates or retake exams unless a documented medical or personal emergency arises. In such a case, it is your responsibility to contact me immediately to reschedule a make-up date for exams or revised deadline for online quizzes or papers.

CLASSROOM CONDUCT

In the classroom, we must work together to create a positive learning environment, and I expect you to respect the rights of other students to learn.

- Please come to class on time and stay until the end. If you must come in late or leave early, please avoid distracting other students or disrupting the lecture or discussion.
- Please respect me and your fellow students when we are speaking by not engaging in side conversations with your classmates.
- Please turn off your cell phone when you come to class. If you must leave it on for some reason (e.g., in case of family emergency), please set it to “silent” and sit near an exit.
- You may use laptops, PDAs, or other electronic devices in class only to record lecture notes, complete class-related activities, or refer to digital copies of course texts or notes. Please do not use such devices for e-mail, messaging, web-surfing, gaming, or other activities during class.
- At times we will discuss controversial issues in this course, and students in the class will not always be on the same side. I hope that you will seek to develop an understanding of the different perspectives on the topics we address—including positions that differ from your own—and to challenge your own preconceptions.
- Even if you disagree with points of view expressed by your instructor or your fellow students, as citizens of this class you are responsible for considering different points of view respectfully. I will do the same.

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY

The goal of university study is learning. I cannot evaluate your learning fairly unless you turn in your own work, and in your work you give appropriate credit for the work and ideas of others. This is what ACADEMIC INTEGRITY means.

In this class you will write an annotated bibliography. An annotated bibliography is a research tool for gathering and condensing ideas and evidence, all the while keeping track of the sources in use. An annotated bibliography is especially useful in the social sciences, because in the social sciences it is critical to cite the sources of one's evidence, ideas, etc.

Occasionally students commit accidental plagiarism because they do not understand that you should give a source not only when you use a quotation (which calls for using quotation marks), but also when you paraphrase or otherwise use information or ideas from elsewhere. In fact, the more sources you use, the better your research might be. The annotated bibliography assignment, done in several steps, will aid you in handling fairly large volumes of information without committing accidental plagiarism.

More information on UWM policies and procedures on academic conduct is online at http://www4.uwm.edu/dos/conduct/academic-misconduct.cfm
ACCESSIBILITY

I am committed to making this course accessible to all enrolled, and providing accommodations or guidance with respect to services available on campus. If you need certain accommodations because of disability, financial limitations, mental illness, and/or the limits of UWM technology, please contact Professor Sziarto or your TA as soon as possible. We will assist you directly or help you find the services you need on the UWM campus.

The syllabus has been designed to avoid having exams conflict with most major religious holidays. However, if you will have difficulty with a due date or exam date because of religious observances, please contact Professor Sziarto as soon as possible to make alternate arrangements.

Any student who has difficulty affording groceries or accessing sufficient food to eat every day, or who lacks a safe and stable place to live, and believes this may affect their performance in the course, is urged to contact the Dean of Students for support. Furthermore, please notify the professor if you are comfortable in doing so. This will enable her to provide any resources that she may possess.

For the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee’s official policies on disabilities, religious observances, active military duty, incompletes, discriminatory conduct, academic misconduct, complaint procedures, and grade appeal procedures, please see the following web site: http://www.uwm.edu/Dept/SecU/SyllabusLinks.pdf.

CHANGES TO THE SYLLABUS OR COURSE SCHEDULE

There may be changes to the scheduled topics and/or readings. Any such changes will be announced in lecture and posted on D2L well in advance. In the event of disruption of normal classroom activities due to an H1N1 swine flu outbreak, severe weather events, or other large-scale phenomena, the format for this course may be modified to enable completion of the course. In that event, you will be provided an addendum to this syllabus that will supersede this version.

QUESTIONS?

If you have questions or concerns about the class, please do not hesitate to contact me. I am available for discussions during my office hours, or by appointment. Please contact me by e-mail to schedule an appointment at a time that will work for you.
