Vision and Mission

The Graduate School embodies the Chancellor’s vision for graduate education: to be a top-tier doctoral research university that is the best place to learn and work for graduate students, postdoctoral scholars and graduate faculty. We accomplish this through:

- Active recruitment of diverse graduate students with full guidance from entrance to graduation
- Competitive financial support for graduate assistants and fellows
- Enriched portfolio of graduate programs with growing recognition in nation and world
- Efficient and effective administrative support for all graduate students, staff, faculty, governance and administrators
- Established graduate advocacy, development, marketing and alumni relations

Graduate Education at UWM

- UWM is one of only two Carnegie-rated “R1” doctoral research universities in Wisconsin.
- Over 4,800 graduate students and ~60,000 graduate alumni fuel the knowledge-based local and global economies that demand a workforce with advanced degrees.
- Students from over 80 countries come to UWM to pursue their graduate degrees.
- More than $12 million in assistantships, fellowships and scholarships are awarded to graduate students at UWM each year. Assistantships offer full tuition remission, health coverage, and a monthly stipend.
- Distinguished faculty and academic staff foster excellence, innovation and community engagement. WELCOME TO THE CLUB!
Graduate Faculty Status:

Determined by your department executive committee, which informs Graduate School about graduate status of new faculty

- Gives you the privilege of serving as major advisor for graduate theses and dissertations
- Gives you the privilege of serving on thesis/dissertation committees
- Allows you to teach and/or develop graduate level courses
- Allows you to participate in academic decisions about the graduate programs and graduate students in your department
- Gives you the right to participate in the shared governance and development of graduate education
Responsibilities of graduate mentorship:

- Meet regularly with advisees to assess progress and decide on the way forward; document the outcome of your meetings
- Take time to explicitly mentor your students and TAs/PAs/RAs in standards of academic integrity
- Provide timely, respectful feedback on student work
- Nominate & recommend outstanding students for internal and external fellowships and awards
- Advise your students on opportunities for professionalization
- Learn how to support diversity, inclusion, and student success
- Learn what is in the graduate handbook for your program
- Ask your graduate program representative about expectations
Developing graduate courses

- If you want to develop new courses to be offered at the graduate level, the course design and content must be approved by graduate program faculty in your department, and by Graduate Course and Curriculum GCC (sub)committee.
  - Your school/college “course master” will assign a course number at the U/G (300-600) or G (700-999) level for the Course Action Request (CAR) form online.
  - U/G courses must have a 30% distinctive component for graduate students.
