

As noted in the university's policy on repeated courses, course repeats beyond the allowable limit must be approved by the student's advising office. Effective as of Fall 2016, UWM's College of Letters & Science and the Lubar School of Business have established additional guidelines requiring departmental approval for undergraduate students attempting classes offered by their academic units as well as the approval of the student's academic unit. Details on specific academic units requiring departmental approval for repeats after two attempts follow:

Footnotes

1. Students are permitted to attempt a single Chemistry or Biochemistry course or equivalent transfer course a maximum of three times. Students seeking to enroll in the same course for a second repeat (third attempt) must be approved to do so by the course instructor and the Chemistry and Biochemistry Department by completing a permission form.
2. . Third attempts at Math courses can be approved at the discretion of the student's School/College advising unit. All fourth takes need approval from the Mathematics Department.
3. The Psychology Department will allow students to retake a course twice (three attempts total). Per L&S procedures students must file a formal appeal to the department to be granted a second retake. This appeal can be filed using the online form found here. Appeals for additional retakes (more than two) will be considered by the Associate Chair and the course instructor and will be granted only in exceptional circumstances.
