The University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee recently earned an "R1" classification in recognition of the outstanding research its faculty and academic staff produce. Last year, the Council on Undergraduate Research also recognized UWM's prolific undergraduate student scholars with the Campus-Wide Award for Undergraduate Research Accomplishments.

In celebration of the dedication, passion, and effort that UWM's undergraduate students commit to research each year, and to further recognize their accomplishments, HARPY is excited to announce Panthera, a new peer-reviewed, interdisciplinary academic journal showcasing undergraduate research on our campus. All UWM undergraduates are welcome to submit papers and academic essays from any discipline (including but not limited to the arts and humanities, social sciences, and STEM) for the first issue of Panthera, which will be published May 2020.

SUBMISSION GUIDELINES:

Submissions should be between 1,500-4,000 words, formatted in 12pt Times New Roman, paginated, and double-spaced. Papers must be accessible to non-specialist readers. Citations should adhere to Chicago Style (Notes and Bibliography preferred). Please submit your paper as a Microsoft Word or other preferred word processor document to uwmharpy@gmail.com by January 5, 2020. PDFs and other non-editable documents will not be accepted.

Please note that work coming out of sponsored labs may need faculty approval.

Submission does not guarantee publication. Papers will be anonymously peer-reviewed by other students; your name should therefore not appear in the paper or any of its electronic identifying information. Instead, please include your name, major/department, class standing, and paper's title in the body of your email. The editorial board reserves the right to reject any submission that does not follow these guidelines, unless prior approval has been granted. If you have any questions, please contact the editorial board at the above email.

Authors will be notified of acceptance or rejection by the beginning of February. Accepted authors will receive feedback and suggestions from the reviewers and must submit revised versions of their papers by the beginning of March 2020.
