Cultural competency and Pre-Professional skills

Taught by faculty from across UWM's schools and colleges, Global Studies students work closely with their academic advisors to guide them along a pre-professional track and future career path. The program's custom curriculum and discussion-based courses integrate international and professional studies with applied learning.

With a rigorous curriculum requiring language study, study abroad, and an overseas internship, students gain a uniquely strong set of cultural competency skills. A partial list of the degree requirements includes:

Global Studies combines the strength of the liberal arts with the specific training of pre-professional education.

- Three lower-level core courses that address people and politics, economics and the environment, and information and technology trends in a global context.
- Upper-level seminar courses designed specifically for each Global Studies track.
- Eight semesters of a language other than English or six semesters of a first language and two semesters of a second language. More than 20 languages are taught at UWM. Students who are not native English speakers may have the language requirement waived, subject to approval by the program.
- 12 credits of study outside the U.S., ideally in a country where the language being studied is spoken.

- An overseas internship, which challenges students' preconceptions of what an international career can be and broadens their horizons while building their professional skills set.

Six Tracks

Depending on the track, students may earn a joint degree between the College of Letters & Science, Lubar School of Business, School of Architecture & Urban Planning, College of Nursing, or the School of Information Studies.

GLOBAL COMMUNICATIONS – for students interested in marketing, business, advertising, information technology, new media, and translation.

This track focuses on the relevance of language, culture, and identity in understanding innovations in and applications of technology, media, communications, information science, and technology transfer.

GLOBAL HEALTH - for students interested in global careers in healthcare professions, international aid, healthcare policy, international health education, health outreach, and international health regulations.

Students develop expertise in global collaboration and partnership, medical ethics and reasoning, equity and social justice, and cultural and political issues surrounding health. This program can serve as excellent preparation for graduate programs in nursing or public health.

GLOBAL MANAGEMENT – for students interested in international business, consulting, education, government, and public policy.

This track prepares students to assume leadership roles in many areas, as managers capable of analyzing transnational issues; business strategists within a global, cross-cultural context; and governmental and nonprofit professionals implementing projects in the private and public sectors.

GLOBAL SECURITY – for students interested in NGOs, diplomacy, nonprofit organizations, international organizations, and public policy.

In addition to exploring traditional notions of security based on the nation-state and the international system, this track considers a wide range of issues, including global health, the environment, human rights, peace-building efforts, 21st-century conflict, social movements, migration, ethnicity, and identity.

GLOBAL SUSTAINABILITY – for students interested in sustainability and development careers as specialists/coordinators/officers, educators/outreach coordinators, and project managers.

This track develops student expertise in the diverse concepts of global sustainability and their application

In their Own Words: “The Global Studies degree is an amazing program. It provided me with a challenging interdisciplinary education that is competitive with top universities in the U.S., while offering a tight-knit community of professors and students to share my experiences with. The skills I learned, such as statistics and GIS, have helped me earn fellowships, get into top graduate programs in public policy, and land my current position in the Office of Environmental Sustainability in the City of Milwaukee.”

to development fields. Students following this track learn to recognize and explain principles of sustainability in human, environmental, and governance systems.

GLOBAL URBAN DEVELOPMENT – for students interested in architecture, Geographic Information Systems, public health, public policy, urban planning, and urban studies.

This track helps students gain a holistic understanding of the global dimensions and local variations of urban development, the histories and economy of global cities, the causes and implications of urban growth, and nuances of international development as applied to changing global scenarios.

Internships Overseas

Global Studies students have interned with organizations such as:

- AMIDEAST (Jordan and Tunisia)
- Association of Galician Art & Culture (Spain)
- Cape Town Refugee Center (South Africa)

In their Own Words: “I completed my internship at the YMCA of Quebec Residence, a temporary residence for refugees and asylum seekers coming into Canada. I worked directly with displaced populations from the Middle East, Africa, Latin America, and Eastern Europe – people who withstood tremendous hardship and yet were simply humans with many of the joys and sorrows experienced by any other person. It has profoundly affected my understanding of refugees and my future career path.”

- Children in the Crossfire (Ireland)
- City of Frankfurt (Germany)
- CNN (China)
- EMPOWER Foundation (Thailand)
- Johnson Controls (Belgium)
- PricewaterhouseCoopers (Poland)
- The Association of American Residents Overseas (France)
- The Santiago Times (Chile)
- United Nations Habitat Program (Tanzania)
- U.S. Foreign and Commercial Service (Brazil)

Global Studies or International Studies

Global Studies is a degree program offered jointly between the College of Letters and Science and some professional schools at UWM. It was created for students wishing to combine their interest in international issues with pre-professional studies.

International Studies is a liberal arts major offered through the College of Letters and Science. International Studies majors can choose from three options:

- Option A: International politics and world affairs
- Option B: International economics and development
- Option C: World Languages and Cultures

“My Global Studies degree is incredibly relevant to my position with AMIDEAST. I speak French and Arabic daily, work with a wide variety of Tunisians on different projects, and am maximizing my understanding of cross-cultural communications and how to use technology to market to Tunisians.”

The foreign language and overseas requirements are significant differences between the two programs. Global Studies degree students must achieve the equivalent of eight semesters of foreign language study, while International Studies majors are required to complete fourteen credits (about four semesters) of a single foreign language. In addition, Global Studies students must study abroad and complete an internship abroad.

Global Communications Track 4 Year Plan

(possible joint degree from L&S and Information Studies)

College of Letters and Science

This sample four-year plan shows just one possible pathway to earning a degree with this major in four years. This plan does not replace the advice of your advisor, and students are cautioned to meet regularly with their advisor to create a personalized plan that matches their particular circumstances. This plan also follows the degree requirements for students who began their college education in Fall of 2013 or later. If you started college prior to Fall of 2013, your degree requirements may be different.

Degree Requirements (brief summary):

- English Proficiency and UWM Oral and Written Communication (OWC) GER - English 102 (fulfills Part A) and one OWC-Part B course.
- Math Proficiency and UWM Quantitative Literacy (QL) GER – two courses can satisfy the requirements. Some courses have prerequisites, however, so a student may end up taking more than two total classes depending on his/her placement test scores. Students will usually take Math 103 or 105 AND an additional math, logic or statistics course.
- Foreign Language – 8 semesters of a single Foreign Language (or 6 semesters of one language and 2 semesters of another language)
- L&S Humanities (HU) – 12 credits, may be met partially by foreign language courses
- L&S Social Sciences (SS) – 12 credits, usually met by courses for the major
- L&S Natural Science – 6 credits including a laboratory
- UWM Arts GER – 3 credits
- UWM Cultural Diversity GER – 3 credits usually accomplished in conjunction with a Humanities or Social Science course
- 120 total credits
- The Global Studies core courses and communication track requirements:
 - Global 101 (SS), 201 (SS), 202 (SS), 351, 451, and 551
 - 12 credits in study abroad coursework
 - 3 credit internship outside the U.S.
 - One of Pol Sci 106 (SS), Geog 110 (SS), or Hist 132 (HU)
 - Econ 103 and 104
 - Two of the following courses, at least one of which must be a writing course: Bus Adm 230; Commun 103, 105; English 205, 206, 214, 431, 435, 436, 449; JAMS 201; InfoSt 110, 250
 - 24 elective credits chosen from approved lists
- At least 36 of the 120 credits must be numbered 300 or above
- Students who complete 21 or more of their elective credits in the School of Information Studies will have their Global Studies degree jointly awarded by the College of Letters and Science and School of Information Studies.

Sample Four Year Plan:

There are hundreds of courses that satisfy various requirements and courses can count towards more than one requirement. For example, Global 101 counts towards the major and as a social science. (This sample assumes no high school Foreign Language was taken and that the student placed into college-level math and English.)

	Semester 1	Semester 2
