Course Description:

This sociology course explores the personal and social determinants of juvenile delinquency and the agencies for its control, treatment, and prevention. SOCIOL 246-001 meets the UWM General Education Requirements (GER) for Social Science because it; (a) Critically evaluates the function, structure and development of the juvenile justice system, (b) Develops students’ ability to identify, apply, and effectively communicate methodologies designed for conducting inquiry into juvenile behavior patterns, (c) Studies sociological theories used to offer meaningful explanations of juvenile delinquency, and (d) Identifies and analyzes various social factors associated with delinquency. It is also an approved Childhood and Adolescence Studies Certificate course since children and adolescents are an essential focus of its discourse.

This class emphasizes a deeper understanding of the individual and social forces affecting juvenile delinquency and is organized into three major parts:

- In the first section, we examine how social definitions of young people and their rule-violating behaviors have evolved over time. We then proceed to the leading theoretical approaches used in the study of juvenile delinquency.
- In the second section of the course, we explore the environmental influences on delinquency, followed by the history and philosophy behind our contemporary juvenile justice system.
- In our third section, we take a closer look at the juvenile correctional system and the role agencies play in the control, treatment and prevention of juvenile offenders.

We explore these topics using a distinctly sociological frame of reference through which a fuller understanding of juvenile delinquency may be gained, although other perspectives will be considered as well. Policy implications also will be discussed.

Throughout the semester, our class will include many small group and full class discussions of readings and assignments. Your active participation in discussions and in-class activities is essential to your individual success and to the success of the course as a whole. Welcome to the fascinating study of juvenile delinquency!

Key Objectives for this Course:

- To examine and understand how delinquency is measured, and how the research findings relate to theories of juvenile delinquency
- To develop your ability to articulate how definitions and meanings of delinquency intersect with gender, race-ethnicity, social class, and agencies of social control
- To interpret and critically analyze basic scientific data about juvenile behavior patterns and the juvenile justice system
- To recognize and analyze intrapersonal, interpersonal, and socio-cultural factors associated with juvenile behavior patterns
- To apply major sociological theories to patterns of delinquent behavior and the juvenile justice system
This syllabus, along with additional required readings, course grades, supplementary materials and other items will be posted on the internet via the UWM Canvas system at https://uwm.edu/canvas/home/ (see below for how to access the site).

Class Policies:

- Everyone is expected to participate actively in class. This means you must read the material by the time class begins and come prepared for class discussion with questions
- There is no extra credit available for this course.
- Phones must be completely turned off or silent.
- Any and all assigned readings can appear on the exams, even if we did not discuss them.

Class Conduct:

You are expected to think openly and critically! Everyone’s ideas are welcomed and will be respected. Because class discussions are an important part of this class, being respectful to your peers is essential. As a class, we are all responsible for creating and maintaining a safe and open environment for everyone to express themselves. Behaviors that create a hostile, offensive or intimidating environment for any reason including, but not limited to gender, race, ethnicity, color, religion, age, disability, marital status or sexual orientation will not be permitted. Finally, please do not disrupt other students’ ability to hear and/or concentrate during class (e.g., do not arrive late or leave early, do not leave your phone volume on, do not begin packing your belongings before class ends).

Grading Policy:

Assignments and activities for the course and respective weights in the total grade are as follows:

Participation (26%) Regular attendance and participation are expected and necessary to do well in the course. Never underestimate the power you have to make a positive impact on the class’s energy and the progress that we make as a class. Thoughtful participation in class discussions is strongly encouraged. Your participation score is assessed through a combination of short in-class and out-of-class assignments distributed throughout the semester.

You will complete a total of 12 in-class assignments. You will be asked to provide a brief response for each assignment, which will include requests like providing a synthesized answer to a question about a reading assignment, a short reflection on a discussion topic or in-class film or notes from a group discussion.

Each in-class assignment will be graded, and your two lowest-scoring assignments will be thrown out – so only your 10 highest-scoring assignments will contribute to your final participation grade. Absence during an assignment will result in a zero for that assignment. In-class assignments cannot be made up, regardless of circumstance. The grading criteria for these short assignments are available to you through our class website on Canvas.

Quizzes (20%) The quizzes will be administered during the first 15 minutes of class. Absences for any reason will result in a quiz grade of zero. Late arrival to class will not only disturb your classmates, but also will give you less time to complete the quiz. There will be 5 total quizzes throughout the semester which will prepare you for exams by focusing on the important concepts and key discussion points; your lowest quiz grade will automatically be dropped from your average with the 4 highest scores counting toward your final grade. The scheduled dates for each quiz are provided in the Schedule of Topics and Readings section below.

Essays (24%) There will be 2 essays (4 to 6 pages each) based on readings, films and other class activities. Each essay will be typed, double-spaced, with Times New Roman 12-point font and 1 inch margins. Late work will be penalized one full letter grade for every 24-hour window past the deadline. No exception to the policies will be granted without documentation of a legitimate verifiable reason, such as an illness or family emergency. If such a case should occur, it is critical that you contact me ASAP to make arrangements.

Format: The American Sociological Association (ASA) reference and citation format should be followed. Essays should adhere to the guidelines published by the ASA at Quick_Tips_forASA_Style.pdf A link to these guidelines is also available to you through the course Canvas website.

Exams (30%) There will be two exams in this course. The exams will cover readings, lectures, class discussions and short films. The exams will include a combination of short/long answer and multiple-choice questions. You will be provided with study guides approximately one week prior to each exam. Make-up exams will be given only for documented emergencies or required university activities. Make-up exams are subject to an alternative oral or essay format conducted in my office.

University Policy on Credit Hours

The credit hour policy states:

Study leading to one semester credit represents an investment of time by the average student of not fewer than 48 hours for class contact in lectures, for laboratories, examinations, tutorials and recitations, and for preparation and study; or a demonstration by the student of learning equivalent to that established as the expected product of such a period of study.

Based on UW System expectations, as Sociology 246 is a 3-credit course, you should expect and prepare to spend a minimum of 144 (3 x 48) hours of your time on preparation and work related to the course. Taking into consideration that the number of hours demanded of you outside of class will fluctuate based on the scheduling of exams, quizzes and essay assignments, you should anticipate investing no less than 6-7 hours per week on this course outside of class.
