GRADUATE COURSE OFFERINGS

URB STD 901  Seminar: Urban Social Structure
(PhD & Master's Core Course)

LEC 201  Marcus Britton  R  3:00-5:40 PM
Online Section, Meets R 3:00 - 5:40 PM

This seminar is a comprehensive survey of topics relevant to studying in the institutional and organized relationships of people in cities. The reading, class discussions, and projects will largely examine and assess the competing theoretical perspectives of cities and urbanization, alternative methods or urban social research, and different urban policy directions. In the study of cities, social theory is focused on identifying and understanding the body of concepts, hypotheses, and perspectives which have been formulated to explain the emergence and growth of cities, the external and internal macro sociological structuring of cities, the social consequences of city life, and the social interventions and polices needed to address urban problems.

NOTE: PhD Students need to take 1 of 4 Core PhD/Master’s classes (URB STD 901, 913, 945, or 971; Master’s students need to take 3 of 4).

Advanced analysis techniques, including multivariate relationships and spatial modeling. (Course fulfills MS/PhD Quantitative Requirement) NOTE: Required Quantitative Course for GIS track

HIST 463G History of the American City

LEC 201  Amanda I Seligman  ONLINE

Online Section, no designated virtual meeting time

This course provides an overview of the history of American cities from Indigenous settlement to the present. It is arranged in roughly chronological fashion, but topics are introduced thematically—so the discussion on any given day may range over hundreds of years. Major course themes include urban demographics; the development of the planned city; infrastructure networks; regulations and services; city culture; and the urban form. Because of UWM’s location, Milwaukee and Chicago receive special attention throughout the semester. Short paper assignments cultivate students’ ability to use primary sources to explore the past. The exams focus on synthesizing broad course themes and summarizing major topics explored in lecture.

HIST 713  Historical Research Methods

SEM 202    Thomas Haigh    T    3:00 – 5:40 PM

TOPIC:  African Americans and Central Cities, 1940 – 1970
SEM 202    Joe Austin M    6:30 – 9:10 PM
Online Section, Meets M 6:30 – 9:10 PM

In 1910, approximately 80% of the African American population lived in rural areas, and 90% in the south. Approximately 1.5 million African Americans migrated to the north and west during the First Great Migration (1910-1930) and 5 million more during the Second Great Migration (1940-1970). By 1970, almost half of the African American population no longer lived in the south, and 80% of African Americans lived in cities. This is a graduate-level readings course on the Second Great Migration with particular emphasis on the central cities. Requirements include one page of notes and questions for each class meeting; two 5-page critical responses to readings; a 25-page final project based on secondary literature, with the form and topic to be negotiated with Joe A. Final project might be a draft of an introductory chapter for thesis/dissertation, a grant proposal, a historiographic essay or an exhibition plan, among other options. Readings will likely include: The Southern Diaspora: How the Great Migrations of Black and White Southerners Transformed America, James Gregory, 2005; Black Metropolis: A Study of Negro Life in a Northern City, St. Clair Drake and Horace Cayton, 1945; a selection of essays by James Baldwin; Coming of Age in Jim Crow DC, Paula Austin, 2019; and Presumed Criminal: Black Youth and the Justice System in Postwar New York, Carl Suddler, 2019, among others. SOCIOL 923 Seminar on the Sociology of Culture

SEM 201    Jennifer Jordan    T    3:00 – 5:40 PM

Online Section, Meets T 3:00 – 5:40 PM

This course will introduce students to a range of approaches to the sociology of culture. Culture as high art, culture as unspoken practice, popular culture, symbolic violence, culture as a toolkit or interpretive framework—each approach will offer a window into the centrality of culture for broader sociological questions, and the methodological approaches with which to pose such questions. We will address a range of issues, including theories of culture, culture and inequality, culture in the city, popular culture, art, music, and food. We will read classical approaches, as well as a range of contemporary approaches (including Bourdieu’s analysis of taste, and Lareau and Lamont’s investigations of education inequality). Students will develop sound foundations in the key areas of the sociology of culture, combining theoretical and empirical analysis and developing the tools necessary to integrate cultural questions into their own research agendas.

URBPLAN 692G Special Topics in Urban Planning: Race, Class and the Just City

LEC 201    Kirk Harris    R    6:30 – 9:10 PM

Online Section, Meets R 6:30 – 9:10 PM

America continues to struggle to reach its democratic ideals, while navigating the paradoxical existence that defines the American experience. America is a cabal of possibilities and challenges. America’s past is replete with ill-gotten gains and violent oppression including but not limited to: the dispossession of Native Americans of their land and the genocide of Native American people; 400 years of slavery and its brutality in which men and women of African-descent were considered chattel and exploited for their labor, the legacy of the slavery experience still having impact today; and the subordination of women over many decades in which their rights as citizens and their right to vote was suppressed. More recently, identity politics and growing nationalism in our nation’s post Obama-era has advanced a mantra of “making America great again” that in the short term has been promoting immigration policies that are terrorizing and criminalizing individuals of Latino-descent irrespective of their status and birth-right.

Over eighty percent of America’s population resides in urban areas. Urban centers that are often highly segregated by race and income, are also often the focal point of poverty, economic decline, and neglect. Major structural changes to the American economy have taken place over a number of decades with devastating economic consequences for urban America. Once major industrial centers, America’s post-industrial cities are now mandated to operate in the context of a global economy, which has had a tremendous influence on patterns of urban growth and decline. These changes coupled with historic and structural patterns of inequity have given rise to palpable tensions related to race and class within our urban regions. Planners, architects, community developers and others seeking to navigate the realities of urban space, must appreciate the long-standing historic, sociological, economic and political relationships that define the complex political economy that continues to replicate the uneven distribution of resources and opportunities within the urban region.

The planning discipline has a tradition of progressive engagement within communities, in which issues of democracy, social justice, and equity play an integral role in defining the questions that planners ask and the solutions that they pursue. The pursuit of a JUST CITY has occupied the attention of progressive planners. The democratization of urban space, the inclusion of community voices and the contemplation of economic equality are all central values of progressive planning. While progressive planning tradition recognizes the possibilities of communities, it is also cognizant of the inherent inequalities generated by a democratic capitalist system in which the economic fortunes of the few exacerbate the growing gap between the haves and have-nots.

This seminar and practicum course will have students explore from an urban planning perspective the intricate array of issues contributing to inequality in urban communities. The course will have students reflect on their own developing awareness and/or experiences related to race and class issues. The course will work to equip students with useful strategies, tools and resources that will support the development of the student’s equity-building practices. The course will also help students cultivate and construct their own social justice framework that they can use to advance and evaluate their actions as aspiring future progressive planning practitioners and progressive community development professionals seeking to promote racial and economic justice in cities. Finally, the course will offer students an opportunity for applied practice through group projects.
